

A multi-storey car park as a form of memorial. Instead of planting trees or erecting memorial park benches, drivers entering a parking complex via a drive-in are diverted into a narrow and bendy slalom track in order to slow down, take a step back from the vulgar hassle of everyday life, think, reflect and honour the deceased. In our increasingly fast-paced times we are having to seek out more and more extreme and unconventional means for just slowing down and stepping back. Our darkened, bendy car park will have no wifi, no mobile phone reception; endless speed bumps; and will pose assorted threats to fast drivers. Tiredness can kill; speeding can kill: we will push our drivers into a state of slow reflection and total awareness, a state of mindfulness to honour the deceased and become more aware of their own living, breathing flesh - all from the convenience of their car. Following this spiritual and contemplative experience, they will be able to leave their car for a few hours (parking meters will provide tickets, as is standard) while they go shopping or to the cinema. The exit will be straight forward, so as not to repeat the mourning process upon leaving.
