

Talented musicians; professional or amateur will be given a platform to show how they roll - alongside their favourite suitcase on wheels. Just as dogs forge a special bond with their owners - one that makes them start to resemble their human companion after a while - every rolling suitcase acquires its unique characteristics through the activities of its human owner and their cross-platform lifestyle. If given a platform to perform, these wonderful travel companions would be able to tell mesmerising audio narratives - sensitive tales from the hustle and bustle of contemporary living - which we can all relate to and engage with. Suitcases and owners would perform in pairs; a succession of duets. The details and life-textures that these reliable travel companions pick up on have not yet been given the opportunity to come to light and it's about time we rectify this and allow a moment for their self-expression. In a format similar to Britains Got Talent, the audience would select the winner, and a music production company would award a grant for the production of an album to the most outstanding effort.
